TABLO - AN ALTERNATIVE TO TIVO

- What is it?
  - Tablo is a next-generation DVR that plugs into a digital TV antenna to capture free, local HDTV broadcast programs including news and sports within the US and Canada.
  - Unlike traditional DVRs that are connected to one TV, Tablo does not feature an HDMI connection.
  - Tablo is a network-connected DVR that uses WiFi or Ethernet to stream content to Tablo apps on connected devices inside your home or anywhere you have internet.

Tablo Guide Data Subscriptions

All new and refurbished Tablo OTA DVRs come with a free 30-Day trial of our TV guide data subscription so cord cutters can enjoy everything Tablo has to offer, right out of the box. After the first 30 days, a subscription to the optional guide data service is recommended for the best cord cutting experience since it enables some of Tablo's cooler features including series recordings as well as out-of-home streaming through Tablo Connect.

TABLO TV

- PROS

- Uses streaming for distribution within your home negating the need for separate coax cable wiring
- Easy to increase DVR capacity (hours of recorded programs) through USB user supplied connected Hard Disk Drives (HDD); up to 8TB
- Can stream multiple Live or Recorded programming streams based on # of tuners in your TABLO device
- Can stream TABLO even when away from home
- FREE APPS for Smart TV's, gaming and streaming devices, tablets and smart phones

- CONS

- On Screen TV Listings Subscription—although not required to use the device, it's almost a necessity
- Although it can connect to your network via WiFi, streaming reliability is dependent on the proximity of the TABLO to your WiFi router
